BACKS DOWN

The clamor was so loud and persistent that Secretary Ickes, as predicted, was forced to back down on his purchase of German steel for PWA projects.

HERE AT HOME

We have many examples, daily, of buying, because something can be obtained a little bit cheaper elsewhere, without any thought being given to the effect on our community life. Richmond is a sufferer from this practice, and Oakland and San Francisco the beneficiaries. Men and women who earn their livelihoods here will nonchalantly pick up their purses, drive by auto or take the bus to Oakland and the train to San Francisco and there expend their money. The result is that the local merchant is deprived of the trade to which he is justly entitled. No community can enjoy the measure of trade prosperity to which it is entitled when such practices exist and are countenanced.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

Personally I believe that it should be the rule of every firm that their employees should be compelled to live in the town where the business is located. Although there is no way to force patronage of local institutions there is nothing to prevent the heads of the firms impressing upon the minds of their workers that it is not only the fair and right thing but the sensible thing to spend their money in the city in which it is earned.

Adherence to these suggested rules would make a tremendous difference in our trade volume, would induce the building of homes to house the added inhabitants, put mechanics to work, pour money

U. S.-Canada Treaty Is Signed

NEW FEDERAL SHIP RULES ARE LASHED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15—UP—A Pacific Coast strike in protest against new government regulations affecting the merchant fleet corporation was discussed by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in emergency convention here today.

The federation, alarmed at reports the new regulations would mean lower wages and lower standards for both licensed and unlicensed seamen, telegraphed Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper and J. C. Peacock, president of the corporation asking complete details of the new orders before the convention adjourns November 19.

HAS NO CONTRACT
The federation, organized this year by Harry Bridges, president of the San Francisco longshoremen, and other left-wing leaders, claims to represent 37,000 maritime workers. It has no contract with employers and holds no status in the American Federation of Labor except through individual unions which belong to both organizations.

The convention called this week to consider the boycott of the International Longshoremen against cargoes from the Gulf of Mexico, where a strike is in progress, has been held behind closed doors.

Henry Schmidt, publicity chairman, announced, however, that resolutions adopted by the convention

Haney questioned the aged man and when he could not elicit any coherent statement, he took Angello to the police station.

Berkeley officers were called and a relative will be sent to take the aged man home.

Conservative Party Wins In British Vote

LONDON, Nov. 15—UP—Great Britain's national government, returned to power, by a reduced though still impressive majority prepared tonight to launch legislation increasing the Empire's naval military and air forces.

The members of voters, who had lotted overwhelmingly in favor of the Tories in yesterday's election, interpreted by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's government as a clear demand for a strong foreign policy that will require more battleships, more soldiers and more war planes.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

As a result of the national "vote of confidence" the government will continue to support the League of Nations to the last, opposing Italy's challenge in the Mediterranean with the full force of British diplomacy.

Negotiations for ending tension between Britain and Italy are expected to continue but no concrete progress toward settling the Italo-Ethiopian conflict is likely for several months.

BALDWIN PLEASED

Statements of the party leaders included: Stanley Baldwin, conservative: "It was a splendid result. The country renewed its support of the national government and expressed

TEXT KEPT SECRET BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—UP—The United States and Canada, unanimously agreed today to sign their half-billion dollar annual interchange of trade on a basis of mutual agreement, which officials here will benefit both nations materially.

PROTES AIR

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15—UP—William A. Freeman, president of the California Cattleman's Association today protested the proposed reciprocal trade agreement between United States and Canada in a wire to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, made public tonight.

Freeman alleged a complicity to Canadian requests for a fifty percent tariff cut on cattle and cattle products would bring further hardship upon cattlemen and live-stock raisers.

Freeman asserted in the wire that the present supply of cattle was ample for domestic demands and exceeds the supply available in other years. He likewise complained that low prices have affected cattlemen more than Eastern industrialists in whose favor the trade agreement is allegedly proposed.

Cattle raising is the second largest industry in the State, and in consequence, Freeman declared, action detrimental to it would reflect upon the State as a whole.

Kenzie King of Canada signed the new reciprocal trade treaty in President Roosevelt's office with considerable pomp because it was the most important pact yet negotiated.

PROTESTS HEARD

By Assemblymen On Tax Proposal

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15—UP—Protest against proposed state severance taxes by representatives of the cement, paint, clay, non-metallic substances, and bottled water industries was heard here today by a legislative committee.

The meeting was staged in Exposition Auditorium for the purpose of sounding out sentiment regarding the proposed measure. Assemblyman Cliff Kallam of Watsonville heads the committee. Assemblyman T. H. DeLap of Richmond is a member of the committee, and was present at the hearing today.

Strong Plea Is Made For Constitution

MARTINEZ, Nov. 15—Hitting those who talk with "honeyed words" during times of stress and demand destruction of prevailing orders, Thomas M. Carlson, Richmond attorney, yesterday delivered a strong plea for support of the constitution in speaking before a citizenship class in Superior Court here.

IDEALS ASSAILED

"We are going through a crisis in the history of the world. Everywhere the ideals of the past have been assailed," Carlson said. "In times of prosperity people pay little attention to government, but when things go wrong it is the government that is at fault. In times of want and stress the industrialist who cannot meet his payroll, the retailer and the wholesaler who at

TWO BATTLES REPORTED IN AFRICA WAR

ASMARA, Eritrea, Nov. 15—UP—An Italian column, after a sharp battle in which scores were killed, routed 1,000 Ethiopian troops armed with modern rifles and captured Aslil, 35 miles northeast of Makale on the edge of the Danakil desert "hell hole", official dispatches from the front said today.

The Ethiopian force, including many fierce Danakil tribesmen, fled leaving 55 dead on the field. Hundreds of wounded blacks were carried away by their retreating comrades, Italian officers said.

PIERCE FIGHTING

An official communique issued by General Emilio de Bono, Italian commander-in-chief, said 20 Italian Askari soldiers were killed and 45 were wounded. Four white Italian officers, including one colonel, were wounded.

At the same time, dispatches described bombing by Italian planes of a large zone south of Makale and fierce guerrilla fighting along the northern front lines.

SHORT BATTLE

The engagement at Aslil involved the left flank of the northern Italian army. The column approached the little town early in the morning. The Ethiopians, armed with Mauser rifles and machine guns, opened fire.

The Italians poured a withering hail of lead from rifles, machine

Several visitors were welcomed by the club last evening. Refreshments were served by Hugh Caudel.

BORAH QUIET ON PLANS FOR '36 CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—UP—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, "mystery man" among possible Republican presidential candidates, said tonight that President Roosevelt would easily carry the entire West if the elections were held this year.

He admitted to more than a score of newspapermen that he had made up his mind on a policy, but smilingly refused to disclose what it was and whether he would seek the Republican nomination in 1936.

HAS OBJECTIVE IN MIND

"I have a definite objective in mind," Borah said, "and I will announce it when the time is propitious."

"When will that be?" he was asked.

"I don't know," the Idaho senator replied. "No one knows what the situation will be three months from now."

ROOSEVELT VICTORY

The Administration's spending program is the subject of much discussion and criticism in the West from which he has just returned, Borah said, but he added quickly: "President Roosevelt would carry the entire West if the elections were held this year."

Reporters questioned him for half an hour about his political ambitions and plans to achieve them. They trooped out of his office with very little information but with the feeling that Borah was in a receptive mood for the nomination if he found it worth while.

PARLIES QUESTIONS

He parried questions with all the ability of a tight rope artist.

Would the Senator enter the presidential primaries? "That depends," "On what?" He didn't care to discuss "personal politics."

"Has he prepared a substitute for AAA?"

No, but he has his own ideas.

Traffic Problem Solved

THIS IS how Stockholm, Sweden's capital city, has solved a hitherto perplexing traffic problem. A "bottle neck" had formed a maze of spins over the canal and boulevard in the heart of the city, but ramps at different levels were designed and installed. The scene above occurred as King Gustaf officially opened the modernized arrangement there.

'DR. SOCRATES,' FILM THRILLER AT FOX SUNDAY

Muni, in "Dr. Socrates," portrays a doctor who pits scientific knowledge against the guns and brute strength of a gang of robbers. As a medical outcast who tries to help himself in a small town, Muni succeeds handsomely until he is forced to treat a gangster's gunshot wound. His redemption comes through the love of a girl whom he rescues from the bandit game that has kidnapped her, facing death alone in their stronghold.

In a tense scene in the hidden-out, surrounded by killers, Muni rises to meet his deadly adversary. Ann Dvorak essays the girl, and Barton MacLane is the man to be even tougher than the "bad man" he portrayed in "G-Men." The story was written by W. H. Burnett, the author of "Little Caesar" and "Scarface."

"Thunder Mountain" is Zane Grey's newest and greatest story of a roving adventure. It is an engrossing story of the Indian world, of a man who gambled on a woman's love and lost, but could not be downed.

"The Big Broadcast of 1936" with 18 stars plus Walter C. Kelly, in "The Virginia Judge" are the two features screening at the Fox theater for the last times today.

Alaskan Indians Favor New Bill

WRANGLER, Alaska, Nov. 15.—Delegates of the Alaska Native Brotherhood today voted 15 to 15 in favor of extending provisions of the Wheeler-Howard bill, providing for the allotment of land to Alaska Indians.

The original measure did not include the Alaska Indians, but an amendment will be introduced into the next Congress by Delegate Anthony J. Dimond. The tribesmen believed the act would result in setting aside of large areas exclusively for Indians.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 15.—UP—Directors have quit taking headache powders when Lili Damita walks on the set.

Two was when the dynamic French actress would emulate Venus whenever the mood struck her, but all that appears to have changed. Lili seems to have decided to be a "good girl." She has finished her latest picture, "Freaky Kid," without a single caption.

Many are the stories told of her fiery outbursts in which she would disrupt an entire day's shooting schedule. All the king's horses, and studio chieftains, couldn't judge her, once her ire was aroused.

"I am Lili," she would storm. "I do not say my way, I think it better."

Typical was a scene during the filming several years ago of "The March King," in which she was appearing with Warren William. Hop and Bretherton was directing. Paul days, Lili had been angry her French accent, but suddenly, and for no apparent reason, she decided to drop it for an English accent.

Bretherton pleaded, rained, raged, but to no avail. The French firecracker was obstinate.

"I think it is better," she said stubbornly.

For nearly two hours not a camera turned while Bretherton and other members of the cast argued with her. Then, suddenly, it had come up, the storm subsided and Miss Damita capitulated.

"All right now," she said. "I do not say my way."

Naturally, such scenes as these did not carry the favor of studio chieftains, and Miss Damita "reformed." So much so that Lloyd Bacon, who directed her last picture, described her as a "model actress."

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Only one have reported many instances of a few White House insiders, a message by Japanese vessels during the past President to conclude a commercial agreement with Canada before the end of the year.

When Premier Mackenzie King arrived in Washington, he was escorted by a Japanese naval officer. The long and a United States naval officer in Manila. Mackenzie King's visit to the United States was a landmark in the history of the two nations.

On Sunday night, the President outlined the main portion of the Mackenzie King speech which he was to deliver the next morning at 11 o'clock. But he left one section blank.

That section referred to his agreement with Mackenzie King. The speech was to be delivered at 11 A. M. He had told the Canadian Premier he would give him until 10:30 to know whether the Canadian Cabinet approved the agreement.

To the end, Mackenzie King called his Cabinet together at 9:30 a few minutes after he stepped on the train. Before 10:30 they had approved the full agreement, which includes 700 articles.

FORGET EUROPE
Behind this burst of speed was a definite and important new policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

A. continued to some of his close advisers just before his Armistice Day speech. Roosevelt believes that with Europe in turmoil, the United States must turn much more to the Western Hemisphere.

That was why he was so anxious to be able to announce an agreement with Canada. Even more important, it was why he was willing to risk the resentment of the farm vote.

For the tentative agreement Roosevelt made with Mackenzie King included tariff reductions on such commodities as milk, cheese, butter, cattle on the hoof and certain grades of wheat.

ARGENTINE TREATY
The treaty may be modified before it sees the light of day. But in its original form, it is a sweeping document. Its 200 items go just as far as it is not further than the famous Reciprocity Treaty proposed by Taft.

How politically risky it is may be indicated by the President's reluctance to negotiate a tariff treaty with Argentina.

More than two years ago he gave a definite pledge of an Argentine commercial treaty. The commodities involved were less than half a dozen, all agricultural, but none highly competitive with the United States. Because of sporadic protests from the farm belt, however, the President has given the Argentine treaty a wide berth.

The day after announcement of the Canadian treaty, the Argentine Government demanded a definite yes or no answer as to whether Roosevelt meant business.

What he answers will be a test of the future Roosevelt policy of forgetting Europe and strengthening inter-American relations.

MASSACRE IN MINDANAO
High officials, congratulating Manuel Quezon as first President of the Philippines today are not saying anything about it publicly, but it is no secret that their chief worry regarding the new republic is Japan.

With Japan now threatening even Shanghai stronghold of British power in the Far East, the Philippines are not likely to be exempt from at least economic penetration.

How that penetration may operate was disclosed by an incident which took place recently on the island of Mindanao. This island is dominated by the Moros, all Mohammedan, who refuse to lease their land to the Japanese.

Christian Filipinos on Mindanao, however, have leased considerable land to the Japanese, much to the resentment of the Moros, who rose against them last summer and massacred one colony.

The Japanese Government, strangely enough, made no protest or claim for this outrage, although, under international law, they were entitled to damages.

Reason for this failure was reported to have been Tokyo's unwillingness to disclose the large number of Japanese on Mindanao. (There are reported to be 30,000, though this figure cannot be confirmed.)

Now that the Philippines have become independent, however, it is expected Japan will come forward with a claim for damages.

It is not a long step from claiming damages to landing troops. Two thousand Japanese were landed in Shanghai last week to atone for the murder of one marine. Several hundred Japanese were killed in Mindanao.

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The town came for the opening of the fair and distinguished European officials helped in the ceremonies.

You'd probably be able to put the whole Crystal Palace in the store-room of one of the buildings in the 1939 show.

JUST ISN'T Most of the shop talk around Broadway these days concerns the amount of dough the movie companies are sinking into legitimate plays. Hollywood has become the big angel of the Midway, underwriting at least fifty percent of production costs for the new season. It's good business, says the film moguls a lot of high-priced hold-ups, and it's reviving the play business.

But it's also giving some of the companies a lot of heart palpitations. There's the story of Alex. Yokel's "Three Men On A Horse" which offered the play first to Paramount for production backing. The executives in that organization were unable to make up their minds, however, and after repeated delays Alex. Yokel finally jacked it out of their hands and took it to Warner Brothers.

Warner's went on in the deal, supplying just $7,500, which was half the cost of the production.

As everybody knows by now, "Three Men On A Horse" is the best smash hit in years with profits running into the seven figures, and still going strong.

No one mentions the name of that play around the Paramount offices.

CHAPTER XVII
CAROLINE went in quickly. "I'm going to ask Alma to supper tonight, Johnny. Could you manage to drop in and share it with us?"

He hesitated, looking at Alma.

"Thanks," he said finally. "I'd love to."

"At seven, then," Caroline said lightly, and drove off with Alma.

"Now why" she demanded a few minutes later, as they unlocked the old Whitaker home and went in "did you let Johnny think you were engaged to Sig?"

"Of course not. Only he might as well think so. He has some Oh, Caroline what can a girl do when she's almost sure a man is in love with her, out he has some mysterious secret in his past that keeps him from speaking out?"

"Well of all things!" exploded Caroline. "And all this time I thought it was the duchess and her high-powered pursuit of a millionaire husband for you that was summing things up! Has Johnny told you anything about this secret Alma? I mean is it a girl or some sort of family disgrace or what?"

Caroline rimaced. "Even if you never make more than twenty-five a week and have to sweat and struggle to get there, you'll be a heap happier, a lot better off, Alma!"

"I'm scared stiff," Alma confessed as they stopped in the Falken driveway. "I'll probably bump into things terribly and I know a lot of people will enjoy my blunders hugely. A Falken reduced to proving just exactly how valuable every bit of her imagination was! It will be a delicious morsel for a lot of cats."

Caroline was silent, aware of the truth of Alma's words—aware of the smart and stings and bruises that lay in store for her. "Cheer up," she said softly. "You'll make good. Then it will be your turn! Meanwhile don't forget about supper tonight. Make it festive by dressing up and bringing me a party mood Alma!"

Missing Woman Ocean Aviator Reported Safe

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 15.—UP—Jean Patten, New Zealand trans-Atlantic flier who yesterday was feared lost on her flight from Natal to Rio de Janeiro when she was 12 hours overdue, arrived at Campo Dos Afonsos here at 8 A. M. E. S. T. today.

Miss Patten was forced down last night by a leaky fuel tank at Salinas Secas, Araruaia, State of Rio de Janeiro.

She spent the night with a fisherman and his family and was brought to this city by Captain Gervasio Aquino, Brazilian army flier, who sighted her plane on the beach.

The young aviator was uninjured when her machine tipped over while taxiing along the rough beach at Araruaia. The plane's propeller was bent.

Fourth street, which has been called the "most glorified flop-house in the world." It receives only the better educated victims of the depression, and its mission is to help them find permanent employment as quickly as possible.

Here doctors, attorneys, engineers, architects and members of other professions and industries come to live while looking around for suitable positions. The place is run more like an unpretentious club or hotel, with residents working half-time for support, and job-hunting the other half.

You're likely to find that the elderly man in overalls, mopping the floor in the corner, is a former broker, or that the handsome, well-dressed young fellow behind the registration desk is a graduate of a famous English university. Once through with their chores, they'll put a flower in the buttonhole of well pressed suits and go out hunting for work in their own line.

It pays to have a college diploma.

ANYTHING but LOVE
by JANET DORAN

Alma Whitaker society girl in the little town of Burnside falls in love with Johnny Anthony, a nobody, who turns up from nowhere and becomes a pro at the country club. He seems to be in love with her, but because of some mysterious secret in his past, things up a barrier between them. When Alma's father Lawson Whitaker suffers a breakdown as a result of financial difficulties, and disappears, Johnny finds him and does all in his power to help Alma, but still draws the line at offering her his love. Alma, rich and domineering Aunt Harriet Falken takes Alma and her father into her home and tries to force Alma into marrying the wealthy Sig Barn-dike, but Alma rejects him. When she and a friend, Caroline Travers, run into Johnny the next day he asks if the rumor that she is engaged to Sig is true, and she angrily gives him an evasive answer.

"Not a son, Caroline. And if I did, it would be the last thing I'd do. It's simply asking for charity. Your friends own a lot of things they can't possibly use and don't want at all and you grow fatter and wane and meek and flinchingly—gratefully! There must be some other way out."

"There is," said Caroline soberly. "But I'm afraid to suggest it. I'm afraid you'd misunderstand. Alma."

"Don't be silly. What have you in mind?"

"The mills Alma. Over the tracks. Could you bear that?"

"Look at it this way Alma. Many of those people earn from twenty-five to thirty-five dollars a week. They have to work hard, but they're free when the whistle blows. I know a number of them. I have them in my Sunday-school class."

"But doesn't that sort of work require a good deal of experience, Caroline? Alma remembered having noticed ads in the papers and the repeated phrase, 'Only experienced persons wanted.'"

"They teach you," Caroline explained, "and often they pay a little while you're learning your class."

"Thirty-five dollars a week," Alma mused.

THE rest of the morning sped by as the two girls discussed the possibility excitedly. And the more Alma considered it, the more she warmed to the idea. It was, at least something definite. The upshot was that she determined to try it.

"Do you dare tell your aunt?" Caroline asked, as they climbed into her car to drive home to Sunday dinner. "She'd call out the Marines! Imagine a Falken applying for work in one of the mills over the tracks!" She grinned, then reached a slim brown hand over to grasp one of Alma's. "Just the same old girl, I admire your courage! I wish I'd had the stuff in me to chuck things years ago and go after something a little more real than this precarious existence I lead!"

"Why Caroline? Alma protested. "I always thought you were so happy? So independent and self-sufficient?"

Caroline rimaced. "Even if you never make more than twenty-five a week and have to sweat and struggle to get there, you'll be a heap happier, a lot better off, Alma!"

"I'm scared stiff," Alma confessed as they stopped in the Falken driveway. "I'll probably bump into things terribly and I know a lot of people will enjoy my blunders hugely. Work To Start Soon On Coast Railroad Line

Work on the coast in the San Francisco and Santa Cruz sections of the coast railroad line, according to Harry Cole, official of the Occidental Railroad Company.

The work will occupy six months in clearing the road and cutting the new tunnel, sufficiently to permit the service. Power shovels have already been moved to the site and construction crews have laid out the route and heavy retaining walls to eliminate slides as much as possible.

The section to be restored was cut originally from solid rock at a cost of more than one million dollars, and takes some 200 feet over the ocean. It took two years to complete.

The railroad has filed suit against the highway district No. 9 and a construction firm for $30,000 damages alleged to have been sustained when blasting and previous construction work caused the tunnel cave in.

NEW INSURANCE RATE FOR MINE WORKERS HIT

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15. UP—Surcharges or compensation insurance rates for workers exposed to dust will result in the discharge of hundreds of men in the mining industry and the abandonment of many properties, R. M. Seabury, attorney for the California Metal and Mineral Producer's Association, asserted at a hearing before the state insurance commission today.

More than 200 attended the hearing, a specially representative of the mining industry, including some 100 attorneys, road construction and auto body industries, whose employees are particularly susceptible to silicosis, a lung congestion developing from dust.

The rating bureau has become hysterical over the situation, Seabury said. "There is nothing to indicate insurance companies would be required to pay large sums to silicosis sufferers."

Harry Sears, president of the California Central Gold Mining Co., and chairman of a state wide mining industry taxation committee, said the proposed surcharges would increase mining companies' insurance rates from 100 to 500 per cent. He asked that the state insurance industry be given 30 days to prepare a defense against the high rates.

Don Burbank, representing the California Inspection Rating Bureau, defended the proposed surcharges, second, that a rating plan based on the ground that which he adopted which would reduce high rates represent the bureau's initial surcharge for firms best estimate of what is needed to which already have taken steps to carry on compensation insurance reduce silicosis danger.

The suggested two possible modification insurance rates from 100 to 500 per cent. He asked that the state insurance industry be given 30 days to prepare a defense against the high rates.

Wool Growers To Open Annual Meet In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15. UP—Representatives from all sections of the United States will gather in San Francisco Thursday, Nov. 21, for the opening of the 75th annual convention of the California Wool Growers Association.

Celebration of the diamond jubilee of the association will coincide with the first showing of wide-spread profits for western wool growers since pre-depression days, according to S. P. Arhbo, Stockton, president of the organization.

"The total income to sheep producers of California from lamb, wool and sheep will be over $13.5 million this year, the first time in several years that the sheep industry as a whole has been on the right side of the ledger," Arhbo said.

Dreaded Scurvy Disease Is Due Entirely to a Lack of Vitamin A

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

SCURVY is another one of the conditions due to vitamin deficiency in the diet. It was a very common disease among adults for centuries, particularly among army and navy men. It was a most dreaded and common disease among sailors in the days of sailing ships, when men were sometimes at sea for weeks and months without any fresh fruit or vegetables.

DR. CHRISMAN

In the late war many died of the disease who were held for a long time in besieged cities and could not obtain proper food. In peace time it is uncommon among adults but is still common in children under two years of age.

Skin Color Changes

In an adult the first signs of scurvy is a change in the color of the skin. It becomes sallow or muddy. The patient commences to complain of tiring quickly, suffering from shortness of breath, and is weak. He is annoyed by itching pains in the joints and muscles, particularly of the thighs. These pains are often mistaken for rheumatism.

Very soon the gums become spongy and sore, they swell and bleed readily. Black and blue spots may develop over various parts of the body without apparent cause. Over night a black eye may develop or bleeding occurs behind the eyelids and causes the lids to bulge out.

Great weakness, shortness of breath, and palpitation soon prevail. The teeth get loose and may fall out. The breath is very foul, and hemorrhages appear in the muscles of the legs. If the disease is not stopped, death may occur from general weakness or pneumonia, or some blood poisoning.

Flesh Becomes Tender

The flesh of the entire body may become very tender. The condition is often mistaken for rheumatism because of the pain around the joints. The bones break easily and do not unite well unless the disease is recognized and cured.

The condition is due to one thing only, and that is lack of vitamin A. This is found only in fresh fruit and vegetables. It is present in mother's milk if she eats these articles. It is also present in cow's milk if she has grass or fresh fodder.

Potatoes contain the vitamin and is about the only vegetable that can be obtained or preserved through the winter, which furnishes a sufficient amount. In Ireland and Norway, when the potato crop is a failure, scurvy prevails.

Orange and lemon juice are the best anti-scurvy fruits. Raw milk is good in sufficient quantity, but the dangers of raw milk are too great for safety. Of the vegetables, cabbage, tomatoes and potatoes are favorites. Recovery from scurvy is marvellous when proper fruits and vegetables are provided.

Every child should receive one teaspoonful of orange juice a day diluted with water and sweetened, later a tablespoonful. Of tomato juice, twice the quantity. Canned tomato juice is as useful as raw juice. Drugs are of no value, and the child should be kept in bed and handled as little as possible to avoid pain.

Miss Curtis Is Financial Genius

By TALBOT LAKE

MISS CATHERINE CURTIS, who went into the stock market when she was eighteen, and has been in and out of it ever since, discovered while she was trying to trade that Wall Street men were somewhat disposed to disfavor women in the market. This made her mad, and since she is the kind of person who always has something doing in her corner, she did some looking up. She found that women own seventy per cent of all the wealth in America, with a goodly portion of this in stocks and bonds.

That was too good to let go by, so after considerable prep work, Miss Curtis last spring launched her Women Investors in America, Inc., which handles women's accounts. So important did her publicity (about the women owning seventy per cent) strike the Administration that she was invited to speak her theories before the Senate Finance Committee in its hearing on new tax measures.

At that time, when you consider women hold $210,000,000,000 of the $320,000,000,000 estimated national wealth, it is no wonder the idea of a company catering exclusively to women was not bad. Miss Curtis was born in New York and educated in St. Agnes' School, Albany. As a health-builder she bought a ranch in Arizona. Harold Bell Wright, who was making a film production of his story, "Shepherd of the Hills," happened to see her one day at Phoenix, and asked her to play a part. She did, and went into the movies for awhile, but as a producer rather than an actor. The experience of handling the business end turned her more definitely into finance, and when she had not enough of the movies she chucked it all and went back to New York.

Since then her life has been intricately wound up with the deals of the stock market. She's so good that she's ahead on her transactions despite a pretty good pasting in the November, 1929, debacle.

Sun Bedchair

The sun bedchair is a new idea in comfort. You can adjust it to a bed from a "sit-up" position without getting up. For small extra charge it comes with a canopy.

School Girls Should Work On Skin Now

By JACQUELINE HUNT

YOU cannot do much with an ugly, blemished complexion in three or four days, but you can often accomplish miracles in three or four weeks. So please, girls, if you feel unhappy about your skin now, do not wait until you have started back to school and then write me sad, urgent letters asking how you can become clear and fair and blemished for the first big party of the year.

Start this minute and follow a simple, but rigid, program and you can be pretty and self-confident by the time school gets well under way. Be honest with yourself. You will probably confess that your habits of skin care are not everything they should be and that your diet is not carefully regulated. Over-illness and blackheads usually precede the acne condition and the minute you notice them, work like mad to keep them from developing further.

MISS HUNT

Wash your face, neck and hands thoroughly twice a day with a thick lather of bland soap and tepid water. After the scrubbing use first tepid water, and then cold for rinsing. You should also use witch hazel or some simple soothing preparation afterward if your skin feels drawn and irritated. Do not use any of the oils of any kind until your skin is greatly improved.

If the blackheads and oiliness do not react properly to these strict, cleansing measures you will have as soon as they occur, or you may get a seriously infected spot that will leave an ugly scar. You will also spread the infection to other parts of the skin.

Pimples should be opened with a sterilized needle when ripe and the contents extracted carefully, then the pimples dried up with alcohol. Do not pick at the pimples as they occur, or you may get a seriously infected spot that will leave an ugly scar. You will also spread the infection to other parts of the skin.

In very serious cases, a physician should be consulted. Usually they will recommend a diet for you and medicated ointments or lotions for clearing up the acne. You can do a great deal yourself, by drinking ten glasses of water daily, and eating fresh vegetables, fruits, milk and good fresh meat at your meal times. Do not eat between meals and avoid candies, ice cream sodas and such rich foods at all times.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "My skin is oily and slightly darkened from exposure to the sun. Can you give me a good pack that will help correct both of these conditions?"

Mix together one tablespoon almond meal, one teaspoon peroxide, one teaspoon bay rum and enough witch hazel to make a thin paste. Spread this on your thoroughly cleansed skin and allow to dry. Remove by sponge with tepid water, then rinse with very cold water or pat with a bracing skin tonic.

QUESTION: "I am a natural blonde, but during the last few months my hair has become distinctly darker. Is there any harmless preparation that will keep it light?"—Ruthy.

Anything that will make your hair really light is in the nature of a bleach. Of course, you can bring out the golden lights and keep your hair fluffy and soft with lemon or camomile rinses. You can use peroxide, but this will make your hair coarse, streaked and dry in time and you would be wiser to let your hair darken as it naturally tends to do—keeping it in excellent condition at all times, of course.

QUESTION: "I wonder if I should use lipstick? I have very pretty white teeth, but my lips are thick and protruding and any lipstick that I have tried yet seems to make my mouth too conspicuous."—S. J. S.

If your lips have a good natural color, I would advise you to omit the lipstick. If they are so colorless that they call attention to themselves, then use a small amount of lip color, but use it carefully and be sure to select one of the duller rose or russet shades that are natural looking. Keep the color well inside the natural line of your lips and spread it evenly by biting the lips together.

Oscar Tests Onion Soup

Oscar, famous host of The Waldorf-Astoria for over forty years, has his own recipe for onion soup au gratin. Here it is:

Four large onions (finely sliced), four ounces sweet butter, one tablespoon flour, three pints good stock (either beef, chicken or other meat or vegetable stock), three rolls, sliced, dried, one cup grated Parmesan cheese.

Warm butter in a large saucepan; cook onions till brown; add flour, mix, and cook for two minutes; then add the stock. Season to taste and let boil ten minutes. In a porcelain dish pour the onion soup, on top arrange the sliced, dried rolls, and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Place under fire, color your soup until gratin. Five minutes of medium fire should be sufficient. Serve promptly.

The Case Where the Girls Have to Invite the Boys, or There'll Be No Boys

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

MANY complaining letters come to my desk from girls who find themselves forced to invite boys rather than to accept their invitations. Here is a typical excerpt:

"When we want a party we have to invite the boys. They take us home, of course, but they never call for us. They never fail to come and always seem to enjoy our company. But they never take us out. (I know that they don't take other girls out.) We decided that it was because of the way we can get together."

Saying "Sorry" Encourages Lying

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

"YOU'VE been in a fight again," Jackie's mother observed. The boy's face was smugged, his clothes were mussed and he was panting.

MRS. GOWARD

Mother hung up the receiver, and turning to the boy, cross-examined him as follows: "You did punch Wally's nose, didn't you?" Jackie shuffled from side to side and with downcast eyes nodded an affirmative answer. "I'm surprised at you, Jackie. I want you to go right over to Wally's house and tell him that you are sorry."

Jackie raised his head. There was a deep intake of breath. "He hit me first, mom. I had to poke him back." "I don't intend to argue. You'll do as I say, Jackie, or—" "I can't do it, mom."

This threat caused Jackie to reconsider. He and dad are pals. He wouldn't incur dad's displeasure "for nothing," borrowing a phrase from boyhood's vernacular. "Okay, mom," Jackie answered quietly. "I'll say 'I'm sorry,' but I'm not at all sorry, really." The last words were spoken shrilly.

ALYCE NOW A MODEL

Alyce Jane Melchior, who smiled her way through successful operations for her "inside-down" stomach, has taken up modeling. She is shown here wearing a pin-checker velvet material and the collar carries a new ccpp style. The hat is included in the ensemble, and is of the same material.

Take Things Lightly

Men, young and old, take lightly the things given lightly. They still have a marked preference for doing their own pursuing and are not above taking it out on girls who insist on usurping what they consider a masculine privilege.

Don't be too eager. Don't cheapen yourselves by paying for your own fun and theirs. The boys who seem socially desirable now may not seem so once school days are over and the social horizon broadened. Youth can afford to wait and not be greedy for grown-up pleasures. Contact with boys at the school-day stage should be free of any great social effort on either part.

Not Much Money

Young people are usually very limited in resources, and have to take what pleasure they can get out of the free-as-air joys of life. The Dutch Tref every man is a comfortable one to employ. There is no reason why girls should pay it all.

The next time you girls feel in a party mood see what luck you have in a co-operative one, for which every one is expected to contribute. It's one thing to hold up one's end and another to be a good thing. One is respected and the other laughed at.

Single men, whether sixteen or sixty, are always in demand by hostesses. There's always a warm welcome for an extra man and, goodness knows, they are spoiled soon enough without beginning in the school days to run after them. The right sort of boy considers it a good enough break to have his girl friends willing to co-operate on a 50-50 basis.

Short Cuts

The bride is inclined to buy pots and pans with an eye to beauty of line and color at the expense sometimes, of more expensive values. Take a great reservation for example. With this in mind, she will see that pots have flat bottoms the diameter of the burners on her range. Also there is a hollow shell reached of heat in pots with straight sides than in pots having rounded sides. Covers and lids should fit down snugly.

A tasty sandwich spread consists of chopped roasted peanuts blended well with salad dressing.

An ice breaker makes the preparation of summer drinks a joy. There is one that looks like a cocktail shaker and works like an egg beater. It is made of glass and will not break in use. It may be used for a measuring glass also.

When pectin is used in making jams and jellies, be sure to keep accurate time of the boiling period. Count it with a timepiece, in fact, start timing the boil only when a full rolling boil is reached. A "full rolling boil," for the sake of those who are not sure when they have it, is a boil that continues even during the stirring.

A notable summer treat is lemonade served in place of water with the noon meal or evening meal.

You can clean plaster of Paris articles by covering them with wet starch. When dry, brush off.
